

Multidimensional Family Therapy (MDFT)

Youth struggling with substance abuse shouldn't feel like drugs and alcohol are their only escape. CHR offers hope for a better path.

When a child is struggling with substance abuse, other behavioral problems are usually in play. In fact, adolescents often use alcohol or drugs as a way to get away from other problems. Our Multidimensional Family Therapy (MDFT) is an in-home, family-focused substance abuse recovery program for adolescents and their families. We help families focus on real solutions for immediate and practical changes at home and in school. We understand that substance abuse and behavioral problems are interrelated and cannot be treated separately. Designed to help reduce the influences that place youths at risk for substance abuse, MDFT teaches families how to understand their child's difficulties and the factors that contribute to them. By promoting a healthy self-image, families also learn how to best support their child.

RESULTS WITHIN REACH

MDFT is recognized as one of the most effective interventions for youth ages 11 – 17 who have substance abuse problems and other behavior including, disrespect and disobedience, aggression and problems at school. According to a SAMHSA report, 93 percent of youth receiving MDFT reported no substance-related problems one year after treatment. 95 percent of families receiving services from CHR felt that their child got the help he/she needed. Our goal is to help adolescents improve relationships with family and peers, and make healthier choices.

YOUTH PARTICIPATING IN MDFT HAVE ALSO SHOWN:

- Improved relationships with their parents
- A reduced range of psychiatric symptoms
- Improved school involvement and positive peer relations

PARENTS AND GUARDIANS WHO TAKE PART IN MDFT HAVE SHOWN:

- Improved relationships with their child
- Increased involvement in their teen's everyday life
- Improved parenting skills and decreased stress
- Empowerment to address the needs of their child
